|---|------------------------|---|---------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 1 | Yamarita               | 4 | 100% Positive | Signature dish; strong brand association; "slaps" = Gen Z approval            |
| 2 | Jollof Rice            | 4 | 100% Positive | National dish mastery; "tasty," "very good," "10/10" – consistent excellence  |
| 3 | Rice (general)         | 3 | 67% Positive  | Core staple; one negative ("isn't even sweet") indicates inconsistency        |
| 4 | Chicken                | 2 | 50% Mixed     | Brand namesake underperforming; "worst chicken" vs "love their chicken"       |
| 5 | Shawarma               | 2 | 100% Positive | "Best in Lagos"; decade-long craving – strong retention driver                |
| 6 | Banana Bread/Cakes     | 2 | 100% Positive | Nostalgia trigger; discontinued = customer loss risk                          |
| 7 | Popcorn                | 1 | Positive      | Snack category; "I love ittt" – emotional attachment                          |
| 8 | Milkshake              | 1 | Mixed         | "Expensive but nice" – premium pricing accepted with reservation              |
| 9 | Pounded Yam & Efo Riro | 1 | Positive      | Traditional Nigerian cuisine; "immediate energy booster" – functional benefit |

|    |                |   |          |                                                                      |
|----|----------------|---|----------|----------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 10 | Moimoi & Pasta | 1 | Positive | Preferred combination; indicates menu exploration by loyal customers |
|----|----------------|---|----------|----------------------------------------------------------------------|

Hidden Pattern: Customers mention specific dishes when satisfied but general categories ("food," "chicken") when dissatisfied. This suggests product-level quality control is strong, but category-level consistency (especially chicken) needs attention.

SECTION 12: EXECUTIVE INSIGHTS FOR MANAGEMENT

The Paradox of Mega Chicken

Mega Chicken operates with a fundamental strategic paradox: it possesses exceptional product quality (67% positive sentiment, "unmatched," "best in Nigeria") but suffers from systematic operational failures that threaten to erode this core advantage. The brand is "underrated" by design – under-marketed, under-invested in experience, and under-managed in service culture.

The 5 Strategic Imperatives

Table

| # | Imperative                  | Rationale                                                                               | Owner                  | Time line |
|---|-----------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------|-----------|
| 1 | Service Culture Revolution  | Staff rudeness is the #1 churn driver; no positive staff mentions exist in 103 comments | COO / HR Director      | 30 days   |
| 2 | Sugar & Recipe Transparency | Health-conscious trend is irreversible; "adult" market is alienated                     | R&D / Quality Director | 60 days   |
| 3 | Experience Modernization    | "Not in 2013" is a generational indictment; TikTok generation demands aesthetic         | CFO / CapEx Committee  | 90 days   |
| 4 | Value Architecture Redesign | $ 30K shock point is real; family budget pressure is structural             | CMO / Pricing Team     | 60 days   |
| 5 | Marketing Investment Surge  | "Underrated" = market share being captured by inferior competitors with superior voice  | CMO                    | 30 days   |

The One Metric That Matters

plain

|                                                                                                                                           |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| CUSTOMER RELOCATION RATE                                                                                                                  |
| Current: 1 confirmed (WendyClaire moved to Amuwo)                                                                                         |
| Target: 0 – no customer should need to relocate for brand access; instead, brand should expand to customer locations (Abuja, etc.)        |
| Proxy Metric: "Would you recommend Mega Chicken to a friend?" – currently implied high; explicit NPS measurement not detected in dataset. |
| URGENT: Implement NPS tracking across all platforms                                                                                       |

Final Executive Recommendation

Do not let operational excellence become the enemy of product greatness. Mega Chicken has built something rare in Nigerian QSR – genuine product love. But product love without service love, experience love, and value love is unsustainable. The 13-year customer who says "your workers suck" is your canary in the coal mine. Act now.
